SEND YOUNG GIRL TO GLEN MILLS

Allurements of Camp too Strong and Parents Admit Loss of Control.

COURT GIVES DECISIONS

Several Civil Suits Decided. Accounts Confirmed. Other Matters of Routine Business.

Familiarity with soldiers at the Gettysburg Camp resulted on Monday in the sentencing of 14-year-old Blanche M. Golden to the Glen Mills School. The matter was before Court at a regularly scheduled session.

The girl has been incorrigible for some time and was beyond the control of her parents. It was related that, at one time when she was suffering from asthma and a rain was falling, she refused to heed their commands not to go to school but threw her coat and hat out of the window, jumped after them, and went on. The Sheriff was finally appealed to in an effort to bring the girl under submission and she was put in the jail after all else failed.

Then the soldiers came, and the girl, fascinated by the uniform and all the gaiety of camp, got completely beyond control of her father and others who admonished her, and the Court was finally appealed to. After hearing the story Judge McPherson sentenced her to Glen Mills where she will be properly cared for.

The Court handed down two decisions on cases heard some time ago. The one was in the case of the Western Maryland Railway against A. A. Gruver for freight on shipments of stock. The railway claimed $393.58 and received a verdict for that amount. In the claim for payment for labor brought by Jacob E. Rummel against John R. Kuhn, a verdict for $3.50 was given.

In the action of Francis J. Dunn against Wellington S. Rittase, an action of trespass for slander claiming $1000, the Court granted a rule on the plaintiff to show cause why he should not file a bill of particulars. The rule is returnable October 15th.

Theodore L. Low was appointed judge of elections in Fairfield.

George Cook, who had been accused of entering the dwelling of W. O. Lyles, was placed in the care of Mr. Lyles indefinitely.

Two accounts were confirmed, that of J. L. Williams, trustee to sell the real estate of Thad. L. Welty and Annie L. Welty, showing a balance of $3308.69; and that of C. H. Rickrode, administrator of Aaron Rickrode, late of Mt. Joy township, showing a balance of $59.53.

WESTERN TRAFFIC ON LINCOLN WAY

Records Generally will be Broken by Coast to Coast Tourists this Fall.

Despite war conditions, traffic on the Lincoln Highway is likely to be the heaviest ever known, according to H. C. Ostermann, Field Secretary of the Lincoln Highway Association, who has been upon the route since May of this year. At one small town in Wyoming where Mr. Ostermann spent the night on his way west, he states that 26 tourists westward bound and 12 tourists traveling to the east shared with him accommodations at one hotel at the stop. The 38 cars in the party were from 15 different states scattered all the way from Maine to California. At another stop at a midwestern point, Mr. Ostermann reports that there were cars from 19 different states in the same garage with his upon the night he stopped there.

Quoting Payson W. Spaulding, Wyoming State Consul for the Lincoln Highway Association, Mr. Ostermann states that approximately 6,000 cars have passed through Evanston, Wyo., up to the first of August of this year. This breaks all records. Some of the heaviest traffic on the Lincoln Highway comes in August, September and early October. The increase based on these figures runs from 50 to 100 per cent over last year.

Tourists traveling the Lincoln Highway to the west of the Missouri river, particularly in Wyoming, Utah and Nevada, have encountered some very bad stretches of road—the worst and longest stretch being in Carbon and Sweetwater counties, Wyoming.

TOOK FATHER'S CAR

Automobile Located Few Hours after Loss Discovered.

A few hours after A. L. Kuhn, residing outside of West York, missed his seven-passenger touring automobile, Monday morning, it was located in Gettysburg by members of the state constabulary located here.

When Kuhn went to his garage Monday morning to get his machine he found another had preceded him. He immediately made known the loss of the automobile to police headquarters, who got in communication with the Gettysburg authorities, who, a short time later, located the missing machine.

It was found that the driver was Mr. Kuhn's son, House Officer Gerber, accompanied by Mr. Kuhn, came to Gettysburg and took back young Kuhn and the stolen automobile. The young man was detained for a hearing on charges of operating an automobile without a license, hauling passengers without a license, and stealing an automobile.

MORE SUMMONED ON FIRST CALL

Local Board Orders Twenty Two More to Go to Camp Meade Thursday.

COMPLETE ARRANGEMENT

Will Keep Boys at Local Hotels Wednesday Night. Those in Town May Sleep at their Homes.

Twenty two more young men from Adams County have been notified by the local exemption board to report here Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock to leave at eight o'clock the following morning for Camp Meade.

The call is in response to a request issued by the State Exemption authorities to send as many more than the required fifty five per cent as possible, due to the fact that some districts would not have their first contingent ready on time. Pennsylvania must send a certain number to Camp Meade and the counties which are behind with their work will have their deficiencies met by other counties.

On the second summons, in about two weeks, the matter will adjust itself and the total of those who go will be exactly the quota originally apportioned. This is 240 in this county.

The additional twenty two who must report here Wednesday afternoon are:

1441. Paul B. Blocher, Littlestown 2064. Robert F. Brown, New Oxford 285. John W. Lansing, Hanover R6 1785. Sylvester G. Miller, Gettysburg 1864. Kenneth D. Zinn, McSherrystown 1917. Joseph P. The board has made arrangements to provide supper, lodging, and breakfast to all those who stay in town Wednesday night. This will be furnished at the hotels.

However, the town boys and those who live near town will be allowed to spend the night at home, provided they report again at seven o'clock Thursday morning. From the time they report Wednesday afternoon they will be in the Federal Service and subject to orders.

NO BOOZE FOR HIM

This Trooper Became Indignant when Offered a Drink.

York Gazette:—The soldier was from Gettysburg. He was a manly looking fellow and stopped Saturday night to ask at what hour the car left for Hanover. When told he returned his thanks and was about to move on when another man, somewhat under the influence of liquor, pulled a bottle from his pocket and asked him to take a drink. The soldier looked at him for a moment. "Don't you know that you're not only insulting me on the street but that you're committing a crime? No, I won't take a drink. Take that!" The bottle was knocked from his hand and the half-pint went trickling over the sidewalk as the bottle was smashed to pieces. The soldier without another word walked on. The insult did not follow.

SLIGHT INCREASE AT THE SEMINARY

Though Five of Last Year's Students Did not Return. College Prospects.

STUDENTS ARE RETURNING

Public Invited to Opening Exercises in Brua Chapel at Eleven O'Clock on Wednesday.

That the war will not interfere with the work of Gettysburg Theological Seminary this year was indicated this morning when the enrollment at the opening of the term showed a slight increase over that of 1916.

The normal number of students at the seminary is forty. Last year there were thirty four and this year the institution opens with thirty six. During the vacation five of the students of last year have been lost from the list. One, Gus Bailey, was taken by death; another, William Day, was married; and three have entered the army, Frank Kelly, Edgar J. Eyler, and George Trundle.

Assignment of rooms and other detail work looking to the starting of studies occupied the attention of the first day. On Wednesday an address will be made to the old and new students, as the first formal exercise of the year.

Prospects at the college are for a satisfactory opening there on Wednesday, all things considered. The Freshman class promises to be encouragingly large, and, while there will be substantial losses to some of the upper classes, the general average is expected to be very good. The exercises will start at college at eleven o'clock Wednesday morning when all students will be required to be present, while the town people are cordially invited to attend.

The faculty will meet in Glatfelter Hall before the exercises and, in their academic dress, will proceed in a body to the chapel where they will occupy places on the rostrum. There will be an address and the usual other features of opening.

The annual reception of the Y. M. C. A. to new students and others will be held Wednesday evening in Social Hall and class work will be taken up on Thursday. Sunday worship will continue to be held in the chapel until the improvements at College Church have been completed.

Gettysburg Academy also opens Wednesday morning with informal exercises.

FROM DAVID YOHE

Sees Fatal Accident soon after Arrival in Camp.

David Yohe, who is now in the Aerial Observation School, at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, writes that he likes the camp and work just fairly well and that he got a bad impression of flying the first day he arrived.

One of the aviators had an accident that proved fatal. "The engine in the machine he was driving," the letter says, "exploded when he was about eighty feet from the ground and the aeroplane caught fire. As soon as he hit the ground he tore off his clothing, but he was burned very badly nevertheless, and died about four hours later".

BAD SMASH-UP

Motor Car and Carriage Figure in this Accident.

Crashing into a carriage on the Emmitsburg highway, near Rose Hill, then going off at a tangent and striking a telephone pole, a seven-passenger automobile, owned by C. Oscar Routzahn, Frederick, was badly damaged at midnight, tires being torn from both front wheels, and the front axle forced back under the car. The occupants of the carriage were tossed out on the road, and slightly injured.

The automobile was being driven by Charles Fogle, and the other passengers were Archie Elstrode, Clarence Schull, Grayson Schull, Arthur Clabaugh. Fogle is wanted for the hearing which will be held some time this week. Those in the carriage were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Angle and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Cramer, all of Walkersville. It was reported that Mrs. Angle had an injured hip. The others were slightly bruised. The carriage was a complete wreck.

TREE LICENSES ARE IN DEMAND

Hundreds are being Taken out at the State Department of Agriculture.

Licenses for the sale of trees and nursery stock in Pennsylvania are being issued by the hundreds at the State Department of Agriculture and from reports coming here it is believed that purchases of fruit tree stock will be on an unusually large scale this year.

The nursery license act, which was aimed to check the complaints arising from operation of "tree sharks," and to halt sale of inferior stock, went into effect a few months ago and about 250 nurseries, most of them in the vicinity of Philadelphia and located largely in Chester, Delaware, Montgomery and other counties, were licensed. All salesmen must also be licensed and establishments in this and other States have been taking out licenses. Some of the New York nursery establishments have been getting licenses for over one hundred men at a time. All of the applications indicate big expansion of the fruit tree business.

The war conditions have practically checked the importation of nursery, shrubbery and floral stock from Europe. Last year some shipments were handled from Holland, Belgium and France, whence come most of the stock, but they have almost ceased. Japanese stock has come in, but nothing like the quantity which was formerly imported into Pennsylvania from Europe.

MORE COMMISSIONS

One in Medical Corps and Another is Flying.

Dr. Maurice Bender, who is resident physician at a hospital in New York, has received his commission as first lieutenant in the Medical Corps of the United States Army. He will report for duty in the near future.

Edwin A. Roberts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Roberts, of Arendtsville, who has been in the Aviation Corps for several months, has successfully passed an examination for first lieutenant, and expects his commission very soon.

BECOMES CHAPLAIN

Fr. Stock is Commissioned as First Lieutenant in National Army.

Rev. Mark Stock, of the Immaculate Conception church, New Oxford, has received his commission as a first lieutenant in the new National Army which dates from September 11th and has resigned from the Oxford parish. Another priest will fill his place next Sunday.

SOLDIER ROWS IN TWO TOWNS

THIS IN CHAMBERSBURG

Hagerstown Reports Soldier Temporarily Crazy by Drink. Threw Stone through Window.

Porter Harrison, Company C, 61st Infantry stationed here, was taken into custody at Hagerstown on Sunday morning between nine and ten o'clock, after having cut some capers against the peace and dignity of that city, according to the Globe which says:

"The man was crazed with drink and it was with some difficulty that he was taken into custody by Sheriff Long and Policemen Williams. The man threw a stone through a window at S. M. Bloom's wholesale house. He then went over to the corner of Potomac and Franklin streets and tore down a mail box, throwing it in the street. This not being enough he interfered with people going to St. Paul's M. E. Church. Charles C. Keedy told the man he had better pick up the mail box, whereupon he made a pass at Mr. Keedy but missed him. Finally Mr. Keedy ran into the church and closed the door. Then Harrison began throwing stones at the church door, damaging it.

"About this time Thomas Rickard was hit by a large stone on the back of the neck, causing bad bruises. Another soldier saw the trouble, and, grabbing the unruly soldier, was trying to beat him into submission when the officers arrived and took him into custody.

"The man was given a hearing before Justice Bitner and fined $5, with costs of $4.39, or 10 days in jail, on a drunk and disorderly charge, and $25 fine and costs of $4.39 or 30 days in jail, on a charge of assault and battery upon Thomas L. Rickard. Harrison took the jail sentence in each case."

Five soldiers from Gettysburg were placed in jail at Chambersburg on Saturday night, shortly after 11 o'clock, charged with drunkenness. One of the men was arrested in the barroom at Hotel Wallace, when the bartender discovered an army uniform beneath the blue overalls.

Early in the evening soldiers purchased the work clothes there and soon afterwards dressed in them, buttoning the blouse up close to the neck. Then they started out to secure the booze. After the man in overalls was arrested, two others were picked up at their waiting automobiles and later two more were taken to jail by the police. The five were kept in jail over Sunday.

All of the men arrested were of the Fourth infantry. One of them in conversation with an officer admitted that he had purchased nine quarts of liquor and had placed it in the Gettysburg car. When the officers located the machine they found six quarts of booze. The soldiers claim that the remainder had been taken from the cab.

Late Saturday night in Chambersburg a Gettysburg camp soldier was heard to curse the National Guard. A former member of the Guard did not like this, so he invited the regular to go to a secluded place. The soldier complied and the ex-guardsmen gave him a licking. The regular then apologized and went on his way, with a better opinion of, at least, one ex-guardsmen, if not the entire division.

FEDERAL AID FOR STATE EDUCATION

Impetus Given to New Law by Conference in Capital.

THIRTY STATES ACCEPT IT.

Labor, Farming, Commerce Are Each Represented—Government's Share For Vocational Education the First Year Is $1,700,000—First Direct Aid For Schools.

Industrial education in the United States received a distinct impetus as the result of the meeting in Washington of the Federal Board for Vocational Education. Officials from many states attended. Nearly thirty states have accepted the provisions of the vocational act, which became operative July 1.

The board consists of seven members—the secretary of agriculture, chairman; Commissioner of Education Claxton, temporary secretary; the secretary of commerce, the secretary of labor and three citizen members—Arthur E. Holder of Iowa, representing labor; Charles A. Greenhouse, Indiana, representing agriculture; James P. Munroe, Massachusetts, representing commerce.

The Citizen Members.

Mr. Holder has for some time been the legislative representative at Washington of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Greenhouse is a former state superintendent of public instruction of Indiana. Mr. Munroe is a Boston manufacturer long identified with the industrial education movement.

Staff appointments under the board are: Charles A. Prosser, C. H. Winslow of the Indiana state department of education, Lewis H. Carris, assistant commissioner of education of New Jersey; L. S. Hawkins, New York state department of education; Miss Josephine T. Berry of the University of Minnesota.

The board has found it necessary to consult with officials of the various states as to the proper means of procedure to carry out the spirit of the law and inaugurate the work in the schools of the country. The apportionment of the various states has also been fixed, so that they may know what amount will be available for the first year's work.

Each state must submit a list of the schools for which it derives federal aid, and this will be approved by the federal authorities before any money is expended.

The total amount appropriated by the government for the first year's work is $1,700,000. The money is designed for salaries of agricultural teachers, salaries of trade, industrial and home economics teachers, training of teachers for vocational work and various investigations.

States Must Get In Soon.

The basis of determining the share of each state in the federal appropriation will be in the proportion which its rural population bears to the total rural population of the United States according to the last federal census.

After June 30, 1920, under the terms of the law, no state shall receive aid for the salaries of vocational teachers until it shall have taken advantage of at least the minimum amount appropriated for the training of vocational teachers, and it is being urged that the training of teachers in the states begin as soon as possible.

For each dollar of the federal grant the state must expend at least an equal amount, and the state authorities who have attended the conferences in Washington are getting the interpretation of the federal board on various phases of the law.

The system marks the first direct federal aid to educational work in the states. It is the biggest venture yet taken in the federal legislation of education.

HIS RECIPE FOR LONG LIFE.

Never Think Evil of Any One Is Plan of Man Aged 102.

Thomas Wardall of Seattle was born in 1815. He is healthy, happy and active.

Questioned as to what he attributed his longevity and extreme activity, Wardall replied in a steady, soft, but decided, tone: "I never think evil of any one. I am master of my own thoughts, and I call upon the angels to assist me to true happiness. Each man is the architect of his own fortune. He lays his own foundation and builds upon it. I love every one and every one loves me. No one could be happier."

Wardall's family are unanimous in their assertion that he has never been known to raise his voice above the natural pitch in anger or passion.

No Kris Kringle Role For Mary.

Mary Gray thought she could emulate the well known Santa Claus in his equally well known act of sliding down the chimney, but Mary Gray forgot that modern chimneys are no longer built for "perfect fifty-twos." Mary is colored, which helped her some, as she didn't show the soot, but her width made her stick fast at her home in Philadelphia. It so happened that the police were after Mary, and they dragged her out and then dragged her off to the magistrate.

Motorcycle From Bicycle.

A motor driven wheel that can be inserted in place of the front wheel of an ordinary bicycle to convert it into a motorcycle has been invented.

DOLLARS GIVE COURAGE.

To Be Penniless Makes a Man Feel Dependent and Cowardly.

There is this to be said about wealth: It gives courage to the owner. Poverty makes cowards of us all.

"The man who is suffering with fear," says a writer, "because he does not know where the next dollar is coming from is in no condition to earn or to attract dollars. Fear always makes a man think he is weak, a nobody. It always pictures the worst, sees no light ahead."

We hear a great deal these days about efficiency and about inefficiency. The fellow who has saved a few dollars and has them in the bank or where he can put his hand upon them is more efficient than the fellow who is penniless. Start out to find a job with never a dollar in your pocket. You'll have a hard time. You appear at a disadvantage when you approach a business man. You feel your dependence. You have a cowardly air about you, an inefficient air. You realize that you will have to accept anything that is offered. You are in no position to look the business man in the face and tell him your qualifications. Want is at your back, causing you to cringe.

But with money in your pockets you assume a different attitude. You realize that you are to that extent independent. You meet the business man more nearly upon an equal footing. You are more courageous, more self assertive, more efficient. You know that you are not compelled to accept the first job offered you. You can discuss wages and contracts and conditions of employment if you are not "broke." So if for no other reason the young man should seek first of all to have a bank account, to have something right in the beginning.—Dayton News.

PUFFBALLS ARE GOOD FOOD.

And of All the Edible Fungi They Are Called the Safest.

Puffballs are the safest of all fungi for the beginner, none of them being poisonous, and they are at the same time excellent and easy to obtain. writes William A. Murrill, assistant director of the New York botanical garden, in the American Museum Journal.

Being tender, they cook quickly and are easily digested. They should as a rule be cut open before cooking to see that they are not too old and that they are really puffballs. If they are white and firm like cream cheese inside, showing no yellow or brownish discoloration, they are of the right age to use. If the interior shows no special structures, but is smooth and homogeneous, then one may be sure he has a puffball.

The "egg" of the deadly amanita contains the young cap and stem inside, which are readily seen when the "egg" is cut, and the "egg" of the stinkhorn shows the stem and a green mass inside, surrounded by a layer of jelly-like substance.

Puffballs may be cooked alone in various ways or used in stews and omelets and for stuffing roast fowls. When used in omelets they should be stewed first. All kinds except the very small one should first be peeled and cut into slices or cubes, after which they may be fried quickly in butter or dipped in beaten egg and fried like eggplant or cooked in any of the ways recommended for the ordinary mushroom. The smaller kinds are much inferior in flavor to the larger ones and need a few specimens of some good mushroom to make them attractive.

Seasickness.

The old fashioned notion that a good dose of seasickness was beneficial was due wholly to the fact that upon recovery the victim of mal de mer is usually so delighted that he is apt to imagine that he never felt better in his life, while feeling normal again is merely so great a contrast to the exceedingly wretched condition which this disorder brings about that exaggeration of one's feelings is the most natural thing in the world. Seasickness is far from pleasant. It is not beneficial, and in rare cases it terminates fatally.

Round Shoulders.

An excellent exercise to straighten round shoulders—good for girls or women who have to sit a good deal—is performed by placing a thin stick or wand across the back and letting it run out through the bent elbows. The arms are bent so that the hands rest on the chest. Keep the arms and shoulders pressed back and down and walk about the room in this way for five or ten minutes.—Chicago News.

Moisture and Temperature.

A cubic foot of air at the temperature of zero (F) can contain only .5 of a grain of water vapor, at 32 degrees it can hold 2.13 grains, at 65 it can contain 6.8 grains and at 98 it can hold 18.96 grains of moisture in suspension. These figures go to show that summer air can hold at least nine times the quantity of dampness that air can when reduced to the temperature of freezing.

"And did he come up to your expectations?"

THREE VICTIMS IN AS MANY MINUTES

That Is the Record of Guynemer, Called "King of Aces."

FRENCHMAN'S DEADLY FIRE.

His Success Said to Be Due to Remarkable Co-ordination of Eye and Trigger Finger—Has Been France's Most Successful Aviator, Yet He Was On Rejected.

The amazingly brilliant record of achievement in the air made by the man who has been styled by his countrymen as the D'Artagnan of the Clouds and by his comrades of the air, British and American, as the "King of the Aces"—Captain Georges Guynemer of the French army—really began when he was rejected at his examination for military duty as unfit for any strenuous occupation. Today, according to the most recent advices, the number of German machines he has brought to earth and of German aviators killed, wounded or captured is rapidly approaching sixty.

Instead of moping because those higher than he considered him unfit for service, the valiant young Frenchman just three years ago, at the age of nineteen, demanded employment in the service of France, and, as luck would have it, but rather as a last resort on the part of those to whom he made application, he was ordered to one of the great French aviation camps to learn the mechanics of an airplane. He was even told that he might, after a long apprenticeship, master the technical knowledge involved and become a full fledged mechanic.

Three Victims in Three Minutes.

No aviator had ever brought down three German machines in three minutes. Guynemer had gone to the assistance of a comrade in trouble, hard pressed as he was by five German airmen. Two of the airmen were brought down by bullets from Guynemer's machine in two minutes, and, mounting high in the air, he overtook and swooped down on the third machine, shooting it to earth in flames. He cast about, searching for the other two, but a bursting shell stripped the left wing of his machine of its covering, and he plunged to earth within his own lines, unhurt.

"I gave myself up for lost," he said on this occasion, "but after falling 5,000 feet I thought I would struggle all the same. The wind blew me over our lines, and like a flash I had the picture of my funeral and all my good friends following the coffin. I continued to fall, and the levers wouldn't budge. In vain I pushed and pulled right and left. I made a last desperate effort, all to no purpose, and then I saw the field toward which I was dashing down. Suddenly something happened, and my speed diminished. Then there were a violent crash and a resounding shock. When I recovered my wits I was in the midst of fragments of my machine, practically uninjured. 'How am I alive?' I kept asking myself. I believe it was the straps which held me to my seat which saved me."

His first fight with an enemy airplane took place on July 19, 1915, after he had left the ground in the parasol biplane, with a mechanic to act as machine gunner. A signal flashed from below told them that a German machine had been sighted, and they went to give battle. The enemy aviator, however, ran from the challenge, and Guynemer was about to descend when he saw another dot on the horizon. This time the enemy scout was headed for the French lines, and Guynemer followed him over the city of Soissons. After the mechanic had fired 115 bullets at the enemy he was shot through the hand, and another shot grazed his scalp.

To the surprise of the mechanic, Guynemer took the machine gun in hand himself and, with several shots, struck the German flier, who sank down in his seat. The machine took fire a moment later and went hurtling to the ground.

Dived to Safety Through a Cloud.

"Vieux Charles" (Old Charles) is the name of the machine in which he has accounted for so many of the enemy, and it is due to the speed of this machine that its operator has been several times saved from death by the proverbial hair's breadth. On Sept. 30, 1916, he found himself twenty miles within the German lines, when one of the German airplanes, a fast Fokker, rose to the attack. The reception was being prepared when Guynemer suddenly discovered that his machine gun had jammed. The Prussian had opened fire and with 250 bullets, fired low, had punctured the landing treads of "Old Charles." At a height of 7,500 feet Guynemer saw a bank of clouds approximately 1,000 feet below. With his engine racing at top speed he dived for the clouds, emerging ten minutes later.

On still another day he came into collision with a large enemy L. G. V. machine, tearing away the best part of the left wing of his own, but this was because his machine gun was frozen, and to escape the enemy's fire he spun around "on one wing" and kept on going just six feet below the L. G. V. The left wing of Guynemer's machine engaged the right wing of that of his adversary, and in breaking away the wing of the French machine was almost entirely torn away.

THE RIFLE BARREL.

Making It Perfectly Straight Is a Delicate Operation.

Following the reaming operation in rifle manufacture, which leaves the bore of the barrel smooth and polished, comes one of the most delicate and exacting operations in gunmaking, that of straightening the interior of the barrel. In straightening a barrel everything depends on the skill and experience of the operator, for, although machines have been devised to perform this difficult work, they still require skilled men to operate them, and they cannot turn out as much work as is done by hand by the old method that has been practiced for years and which can only be acquired by long experience. The straightening block has a heavy base, on which are fixed two hardened bars of steel set a short distance apart and at an angle with one another. A north window is necessary, where a steady, unobstructed light is had, and the upper half of this window usually has a large pane of fine ground glass. Across this glass at about the middle is fixed a straightedge of wood. The operator places a barrel on a rest and looks through it at the straightedge on the window, observing the shadow cast by the edge on the polished interior of the bore.

This shadow extends about halfway down the bore, and if the latter is perfectly straight the shadow shows two straight dark lines, one on either side of the bore and slightly below its center. If, however, there is a crook in the bore the lines of the shadow diverge from a straight line and zigzag in various directions as the operator revolves the barrel by hand. This indicates that there are crooks in the barrel. To correctly observe these delicate indications requires unusually perfect sight, and to locate the point and nature of the crook is a matter of long experience and judgment.

When the operator has located a crook he lays the barrel across the bars of his straightening block with the high point of the curve uppermost and strikes it with a heavy hammer made of copper or babbitt metal, and great judgment is necessary to know just how hard to strike to remove the crook. This process of observation and straightening is repeated until the two shadow lines are perfectly true for one-half of the length of the barrel and then is repeated for the other half, observations being taken from the opposite end. Another method of straightening sometimes practiced is by placing in the muzzle of the gun a lens covered with cement, in which a circle is scratched. On looking through the barrel with a suitable light a series of rings appears in the bore, and the slightest lack of concentricity of these rings indicates a defect. This is said to be an extremely delicate test.—Scientific American.

Won by His Cool Head.

"One day," says a writer in Munsey's Magazine, "when H. P. Davidson of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. was a teller in the Astor Place bank, a crank presented a draft for $1,000 and young Davidson looked up to see a pistol pointed at him. He smiled and commenced to read the face of the draft: 'Astor Place bank—Pay to the order of Almighty God the sum of $1,000 when presented by Charles Freeman.' 'Do you want it in dimes?' asked Davidson in a very loud voice and began to count the money. Then the bank's policeman, whose attention had been called to the situation by the teller's loud utterance, seized the half crazy man from behind. The teller's level headedness and nerve saved his life, doubtless."

How Parchment Got Its Name.

The Greeks of Pergamus are said to have first prepared parchment from the skins of the goat or sheep. They were curried, deprived of all fat, thinned uniformly by the knife, dyed or whitened and finally rubbed down with pumice stone to a smooth and even surface. Called pergamenum from the city of its origin, the new material became parchment in archaic French and parchment in the English tongue.

"Potter's Field."

"Potter's field," the graveyard in which are buried those who are interred at public expense, comes by its name legitimately. In England and the continent the clay used to make pottery was dug up in long trenches, which were left unfilled. Common consent soon made it possible for these unsightly stretches of ground to be put to the useful purpose of interring the bodies of those who were cared for as a charge upon the country.

LEAGUE WATCHES PLAYERS' DRAFT

Plenty of Good Men in Blue Ridge but Magnates will not Spend.

Blue Ridgers need not be disappointed if the draft on September 20 does not take a big number of them. The fact that only one man went via the sale route is evidence that the big leagues in this time of meager profits due to the war, and the chances that they take in the purchasing are not going to put any larger hole in their pocketbooks than they can help, this year.

There are not many leagues to work the lottery on this year either for the Commission has ruled that the leagues who have not paid salaries have lost claim on their players. None of the majors are getting rid of much of their lure these days. There have been no sensational sales and the managers are doing all they can to make the talent they have on hand produce the goods.

In some ways this is a good thing, a good thing for the majors for it means more economy and a little more brains on the part of major league managers to do the thing, but the minors are the leagues that give the players their start and are the real developing grounds, and if they cannot make money they cannot live, and eventually base ball will die as a result.

Playing the best ball and the fastest in its history the Blue Ridge has many men who should be given a chance in the big show this year and it may depend on whether the big league magnates are liberal enough to draw Blue Ridge names from the lottery as to whether the circuit will be with us in 1918.

World Is Changing.

The world is changing, and humanity has less patience with difficult people. Cranky workers are not given preference even when they are distinguished by unusual skill. Women who aspire to popularity know that they must bury all annoyance at whatever does not please them in the treatment accorded them. They cannot afford to voice any sensitive feeling or take any step toward retaliation. The lesson may be hard, but it is decidedly wholesome, and the pity of it is that so few women care to take it.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

WED AFTER LONG SEPARATION

The wedding of Clarence Seiling, of Dallastown, butcher, employed by M. M. Brown, of West York, and Mrs. Veridia Gaber, of Philadelphia, Sunday evening at 8 o'clock in St. James Evangelical Lutheran church, West York, which was performed by Rev. C. F. Jacobs, the pastor, was the culmination of a romance which had its inception about 25 years ago when Mr. Seiling met his present wife, then Miss Erdley, at the Bloomsburg fair. A courtship, which lasted nearly two years, resulted in their engagement to wed. A few days before the time set for their marriage a quarrel took place and the pair separated.

Mr. Seiling married Laura E. Neff, of Yoe, in 1894, and about 13 years after their wedding separated, and since then has been working in different cities throughout the country. Miss Erdley, after the quarrel, moved to Milton where she was wooed and won by John Gaber, of Philadelphia, in 1901. Last year her husband died, and last March Mrs. Gaber wrote a letter to Mr. Seiling's mother, at Dallastown and at the time the letter arrived the son was home on a visit and it was the first he had heard from his former sweetheart since their quarrel more than a score of years ago. A correspondence followed, and the old love was rekindled. Mr. Seiling procured a divorce from his former wife, and the marriage, which was to have taken place years ago, was performed Sunday evening.

ORPHANS SHUT OUT

The York County Court Monday ordered the directors of the Monaghan township schools to show cause why they refuse to admit to the public schools 23 children living at the Messiah Orphanage, a charitable home. It is said that when the children went to the school at the beginning of the term the teacher refused to admit them and slammed the door in their faces. The orphanage authorities state that under the school code it is incumbent upon the school directors of the township wherein an institution such as theirs is located to receive the children as pupils upon such terms as may be agreed upon.

CYCLIST'S LEG BROKEN

Thrown from his motorcycle Sunday morning, shortly before 2 o'clock, when his machine, said to have been going at a rate of speed, struck a buggy on the Wrightsville pike near Stony Brook, Clifford O'Bryan, 27 years old, of York, sustained a fracture of the left leg and bruises. He was taken to the York hospital. A woman, who, it is said, was with O'Bryan, was taken to the Keystone hotel. The buggy in which Mr. and Mrs. Harry Peters, Springettsbury township, it is said, was struck a glancing blow, and although the latter was thrown out, she was uninjured. After the collision the motorcycle skidded for a distance of about 100 feet before being stopped by an obstruction.

PATTERNS FOR SUGAR PLANT

A contract to outfit one of the largest sugar refineries in existence, is being executed at the pattern works of Hoffman Brothers, York. This firm recently completed gigantic patterns on a marine contract. The new contract comprises at least 200 patterns, all dressed with hard wood. At the same time work on turbine patterns is in progress, the contracts on hand being sufficient to keep the plant operating day and night for an indefinite period. The present force of 17 men, it was stated, is not sufficient, and more pattern makers will be employed if they can be had. Additional machinery and enlargement of the plant, together with the installation of a huge steam heating system, have enabled the concern to increase its working force and expand its business.

FRANKLIN COUNTY

DIES FROM INJURIES

Cyrus Smith died Saturday morning at his home near Coesytown from injuries he received in a run-off Tuesday. Mr. Smith, who was tenant on the Nicewander farm, was going to the mill at Mason & Dixon with a two-horse wagon. The team scared, for some cause that will probably never be known, and ran at a furious dash down the road. In his effort to check the team, Mr. Smith drew them over towards a fence. In doing so the wagon upset and he was thrown out. His feet became entangled in the lines and he was dragged for a distance of six hundred yards. His clothing was torn from his body and his flesh was scraped off in many places to the bone.

John P. Hade and John Forsythe were working in a field near the scene and heard the clatter of the runaway team and wagon rumbling over the road. They ran to the point from where the noise proceeded and found the horses standing still in the road and Smith naked and bleeding from a hundred wounds and his bones exposed at places. His feet were still entangled in the lines. He was unconscious and life seemed almost extinct. He was a big man, weighing 250 pounds, and the horses were exhausted by the pull.

IS SERIOUSLY HURT

Mrs. Mary C. Crawford, the aged widow of W. B. Crawford, met with an unfortunate accident at her home in Fayetteville Sunday morning when she fell from the back porch to the concrete walk, a distance of several feet. Mrs. Crawford is in a serious condition. Mrs. Crawford is in her 83d year and up to the time of the accident had been in comparatively good health. In the fall she sustained a fractured skull, the back of her head striking the hard concrete.

BIG MEETING OF BUSINESS HEADS

Will Discuss what they Can Do toward Winning the War for Democracy.

ARE AT ATLANTIC CITY

Administration Takes Note of this Important Gathering at Seaside Resort. Conservation Subject.

Atlantic City, Sept. 18.—With "victory" as their slogan, American business men met here today for their first war convention. Leaders in finance, trade and industry, in the greatest gathering of its kind ever held in this country, met to discuss their war duties and to prepare for readjustments after the world struggle ends.

Prices, priorities, industrial relations, diplomatic problems—the whole sweep of war's intricate questions—will be treated in addresses by the country's war chiefs and distinguished foreign representatives. The convention was called by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

When the meetings close on Friday, America's business men will be in step with the country's march against autocracy, "showing the whole world", said President R. G. Rhett, Charleston, S. C., "in what spirit and with what determination business faces the task ahead."

What may be done to control prices and profits will be one of the biggest problems before the business men, Secretary of War Baker, Secretary of Interior Lane, Food Administrator Herbert C. Hoover and Chairman Frank A. Scott, of the War Industries Board, who are on the program, may touch on the price question. They will appeal for co-operation in war work.

President Rhett's message on private interests during the war is: "Every business man, firm or corporation must subordinate individual interests to the common cause. This they are ready to do, all that is needed is direction."

Secretary Elliot H. Goodwin stated that the Chamber of Commerce has gone flatly on record against war profiteering. "It must not be overlooked, however," he said, "that business cannot live without profit. That is the rule of the game. Patriotic business men are perfectly ready to work on another basis so long as they live, but they must have clearly indicated what the new basis will be."

Special interest is shown in the address of Boris Bahmetieff, Russian ambassador, and of Lord Northcliffe, Chairman British Mission, who are on the program. Among prominent business men who will be heard by the convention are A. C. Bedford, president of Standard Oil, and George M. Reynolds, Chicago banker.

The discussion of readjustments to follow the war will deal with the course of prices, the return of the army into civil and industrial life and the new international relations of the United States.

Under ways and means by which business may most readily adjust itself to war conditions, will come discussion of industries not essential to war. Food conservation, labor troubles and foreign trade also will be taken up.

How business may render greater service in winning the war will be a major topic throughout the convention. "The Chamber's Executive Committee," said President Rhett, "believes that the time has arrived when business men of the nation should see what they may do to develop greater efficiency and render greater service in carrying the war to a quick and successful conclusion."

SIGNS SNYDER

Ex-Maroon Player will be with Cumberland Next Year.

"Bugs" Snyder, who was with the Chambersburg club of the Blue Ridge League during the season of 1915, will don a Cumberland uniform next season. "Colonel" Russler, business manager of the Cumberland club, stated that Snyder had signed a contract with the club and would be with the team next season. "Bugs" ability as a ball-thrower needs no explanation to the fans of this vicinity, for all know, who have seen him romp on the green of the different parks of the league, that he is a good fielder and hitter. "Bugs" will help strengthen the Colts' outfield to a great extent.

Keep Hands Off Wounds.

A wound should never be touched with the bare hands. It is better to cover it up just as it is rather than to run the risk of introducing another colony of perhaps even more dangerous germs. If possible, however, the wound should be washed out with an antiseptic solution. If water is to be used, it should have been boiled at least ten minutes, as simply bringing it to the boiling point will not kill the germs.

WEDNESDAY FOR THE PRIMARIES

Contests Generally are Local in Character and there is Little Interest.

WET AND DRY CONTESTS

In Many Places Only One Candidate for Each Office and those on Ballot Sure to Win.

Harrisburg, Sept. 18.—Polling places will be open in every precinct in the state to-morrow for the fall primary elections, the voting hours being from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m., the same as on a regular election day. Liquor dealers of all classes must refrain from business between 6 a. m. and 8 p. m., these hours being shorter than on regular election day.

Inasmuch as no state-wide officers are to be chosen, interest in the various fights, some of which are bitter, is largely local.

The three-cornered battle for the Pittsburgh mayoralty nomination, however, has attracted attention in every county because of its probable bearing on the fight for the Republican gubernatorial nomination next spring.

In Philadelphia, the situation in the Fifth Ward, where a heavy battle is on for the Republican leadership of the ward, is being watched with an interest almost as great as if an important city or state office were at stake.

In Dauphin county the Republican organization led by Senator E. E. Beidelman and Secretary of the Senate W. Harry Baker, is being attacked on two offices—mayor of Harrisburg and coroner of Dauphin county. No contests exist for any partisan nomination except coroner.

In numerous counties, especially those who elect associate judges, the usual sharp fight is on for control of license court by the "wets" or "drys".

In counties where there is only one candidate for judge, law or associate, he will in all likelihood win at the primaries and be unopposed in November. The same probably will happen where only two candidates have appeared for one seat. In Schuylkill county there are four candidates for two judgeships and the primaries may settle the issue, too, under the fifty-one per cent law. For a candidate to become a sole nominee through the primaries he must have not only more than half the votes cast for judge, but also more than half of the total number of votes cast for any office in the county.

NURSE WAS UNDER FIRE IN FRANCE

Active in Field Hospital Work and Served through Great Bombardment.

SHELLS HIT ABOUT HER

Letter to Friends Tells of German Attack and Rain of Bombs. Alone All Night Nursing Wounded.

Miss Norman Derr, of near Frederick, has, from the beginning of the war, been nursing in the field hospitals in France.

The following are extracts from a letter recently received from her:

"It is a bit surprising to arrive within two miles of the station to which you have been ordered and encounter section after section of motor cars tearing at full speed, laden with the blesses you are on your way to take care of, and to learn that shells are dropping all over the very spot you are headed for. Of course, you won't hear of turning back and you only prod the chauffeur to get there as fast as he can.

"We did stop at the last hill, though, just to calculate our chances on the down-grade into the hospital park. One could not have chosen a scene more tragically splendid. The distances were vast, laid in great masses of golden light and shade and all the lovely woods and fields were barred with wavering, plummy lines of smoke that belched red flames here and there. Just in front of us lay a town whose name you often read, and whose twin ruined towers are the glory and the grief of all those who love the work of the Middle Ages. How terribly beautiful they looked there, with the rosy light glinting on their torn windows, rising calm and regnant out of a furious sea of exploding shells! For three years they have withstood the shock. Their flowers and jewels are scattered, but their symmetry is yet unspoiled—symbol of the soul of France.

"Aeroplanes swooped about nervously, bombarding each other; captive balloons bobbed up against the clouds, and another shell dropped in the park of the Chateau-hospital at our feet; all the air trembled with explosions. It seemed more like the composition of a master war-artist than anything real; and one seemed to be looking at a biograph of the story of the last three years. It was too intense and I instinctively stooped to gather the tender blue-bells swaying at my feet.

"En route again, and we slid down the hill. Just a minute or two after we passed, a shell hit the roadside. When we pulled up at the hospital steps, all the medical corps met us. The chief medical officer gravely advanced and informed us that the last blisse had been sent away on account of the bombardment, and that he left me free to return to my former station, if I preferred. Perhaps he would not have made the offer had he seen the papers I carried in my pocket. At all events he made no other offer to gainsay my decision to remain than to point silently to an enormous hole, with rays running out like craters in the moon, a few feet from the steps. My three companions greeted me charmingly—all sweet, fine, women—and after dining on a great table in the basement, where the provisions are kept, we stretched our mattresses on the same table and slept like babes. I must explain, here, lest you think me too phlegmatic, that I had not been in bed for several nights, the care of the wounded at Eprenay rendering it impossible.

Four Houses Near Destroyed

"And that takes me back to the last and some interesting news. I wonder if, on Friday evening, the 6th of July, at 10:30, you had a vision of me crossing a moonlit town under such a rain of bombs and shrapnel as made the most gorgeous pyrotechnic display you can imagine. I had just undressed when the first bomb fell. I dressed at once, and had I stopped to parley with my good landlady, who barred the doorway, declaring that I should be killed if I went out, I should have been caught in the rue Doujon, for after I passed a bomb fell, destroying four houses. I admit it gave me a queer feeling—there's a crash as of colliding planets and a gust of gas that isn't pleasant—but, somehow, I knew I was being protected, so I did not run nor swerve, though one of the Boches was humming just over my head, and all the air was filled with flying balls of fire from our brave little 75.

"When I reached my service on the second floor of the hospital, I found a lot of men nurses with helmets on their heads and stretchers too confused to act, and my poor blesses lying very frightened in the dark. Strange as it may seem, these wounded heroes do not bring their trench courage with them into the hospital. As soon as possible I got all who could be moved down into the basement, and by the time I had lined them up as comfortably as possible on their stretchers, the new blesses began to arrive—soldiers, old men, women and children—several dead when they arrived. By this time some of the surgeons arrived, and there being sufficient to attend to the dressings downstairs and some above, I went back to my floor with two blesses—one a brigadier in desperate case, with both legs blown off or, more accurately, hanging by a few shreds of tendon. I gave him serum in floods and others things, but the shock had been too great; he died toward morning.

Only Two Bombardments

"And so I passed the terrible night, all alone up there under the roof, with only a wounded man to help me; and when the first thrush sang out among the poplars, and the town siren shrieked there was no more danger. I trotted home for my cold bath before beginning another day. The Boches had left three hundred visiting cards. Imagine the havoc wrought upon the tiny town of Eprenay. Now that I have a little spare time, and have nothing to do but watch the aeroplanes and listen to the big guns there behind the trees, and muse over the enchanting loveliness of my surroundings, I can send you a sketch of my experiences. Such is the spell of beauty of this place and its environment, that it seems as if no death nor danger could ever enter. I have been wonderfully protected, and here, though we are only about six miles from the German lines, I honestly believe there is much less danger than at Eprenay. They have bombarded the place but twice and may never do it again; there being no strategic reason."

TO OUR READERS

The Gettysburg Times takes absolutely no part in politics, being neutral on all such matters. Anything that appears in our general news columns, concerning state or national politics, is furnished us by The American Press Association, a concern which gives the same news to Republican, Democratic, Prohibition, or Socialist papers and which is strictly non-partisan.

EVERYBODY GETS IT

When we tell you that almost 1000 copies of The Times are distributed to paying subscribers in Gettysburg every evening you can have some idea of the way the people of the town read the paper. The population is estimated at 4500, and at the usual average of five to a family, there would be only 900 residences in the town.

When we tell you that no less than 115 copies of The Times go daily to subscribers in Biglerville, 90 in Arendtsville, 65 in Bendersville, and 55 in Aspers, you can see how the upper end of the county reads the paper. And the routes from Biglerville, Bendersville, and Gardners take hundreds more.

When we tell you that Littlestown receives 78 copies of The Times each evening, and New Oxford almost 50, that Hunterstown, and all the other towns in that general section contribute their full share you can realize how completely The Times covers that neighborhood.

When our list shows 75 subscribers in Fairfield, 47 in Cashtown, 61 at Orrtanna, and 32 at McKnightstown, you can get some conception of the percentage of people who take The Times in the western end of the county.

And about 800 papers on Gettysburg's rural routes every day bring all those people into close touch with the town.

Consider the above figures a bit, think over the sizes of the various towns mentioned and then notice how many papers go there, and you will readily see that almost everybody reads

THE TIMES.

SAYS HOT WATER WASHES POISONS FROM THE LIVER

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water with Phosphate in it, Before Breakfast.

To feel as fine as the proverbial fiddle, we must keep the liver washed clean, almost every morning, to prevent its sponge-like pores from clogging with indigestible material, sour bile and poisonous toxins, says a noted physician.

If you get headaches, it's your liver. If you catch cold easily, it's your liver. If you wake up with a bad taste, furred tongue, nasty breath or stomach becomes rancid, it's your liver. Sallow skin, muddy complexion, watery eyes all denote liver uncleanness. Your liver is the most important, also the most abused and neglected organ of the body. Few know its function or how to release the dammed-up body waste, bile and toxins. Most folks resort to violent calomel, which is a dangerous, salivating chemical which can only be used occasionally because it accumulates in the tissues, also attacks the bones.

Every man and woman, sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, to wash from the liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, the poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Limestone phosphate does not restrict the diet like calomel, because it can not salivate, for it is harmless and you can eat anything afterwards. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, and any pharmacist will sell you a quarter pound, which is sufficient for a demonstration of how hot water and limestone phosphate cleans, stimulates and freshens the liver, keeping you feeling fit day in and day out.

CHAPTER XXI.

Carlotta had set the hour for meeting Wilson at nine, when the late dusk of summer had fallen; and she met him then, smiling, a faintly perfumed white figure, slim and young, with a thrill in her voice that was only half assumed.

"It's very late," he complained. "Surely you are not going to be back at ten."

"I have special permission to be out late."

"Good!" And then, recollecting their new situation: "We have a lot to talk over. It will take time."

At the White Springs hotel they stopped to fill the gasoline tank of the car. Joe Drummond saw Wilson there. In the sheet-iron garage alongside of the road. The Wilson car was in the shadow. It did not occur to Joe that the white figure in the car was not Sidney. He went rather white, and stepped out of the zone of light. The influence of Le Moyne was still on him, however, and he went on quietly with what he was doing. But his hands shook as he filled the radiator. He had been an ass; Le Moyne was right. He'd set away to Cuba if he could—any tests; she was shrewd enough to know that Wilson would detect her malingering very quickly—and begged to be taken into the house.

"I feel very ill," she said, and her white face bore her out.

Schwittzer and Wilson carried her in and up the stairs to one of the rooms. The little man was twittering with anxiety. He had a horror of knockouts drops and the police. They laid her on the bed, her hat beside her; and Wilson, stripping down the long sleeve of her glove, felt her pulse. "There's a doctor in the next town," said Schwittzer. "I sent for him a while ago—my wife's not very well."

"I'm a doctor."

"Is it anything serious?"

"Nothing serious."

He closed the door behind the relieved figure of the landlady, and, going back to Carlotta, stood looking down at her.

"What did you mean by doing that? You were no more faint than I am."

She closed her eyes.

"I don't remember. Everything went black. The lanterns—"

He crossed the room deliberately and went out, closing the door behind him. He saw at once where he stood—

In what danger. If she insisted that she was ill and unable to go back, there would be a fuss. The story would come out. Everything would be gone. Schwittzer's, of all places!

At the foot of the stairs, Schwittzer pulled himself together. After all, the girl was only ill. There was nothing for the police. He looked at his watch. The doctor ought to be there by this time.

Another car. Perhaps it was the doctor. A young man edged his way into the hall and confronted him.

"Two people just arrived here. A man and a woman—in white. Where are they?"

"Upstairs—first bedroom to the right."

Joe went up the staircase. At the top, on the landing, he confronted Wilson. He fired at him without a word—saw him fling up his arms and fall back, striking first the wall, then the floor.

He Fired at Him Without a Word.

The buzz of conversation on the porch suddenly ceased. Joe put his revolver in his pocket and went quietly down the stairs. The crowd parted to let him through.

Carlotta, crouched in her room, listening, not daring to open the door, heard the sound of a car as it swung out into the road.

Nearly everyone who has catarrh knows how foolish it is to try and cure it by dosing the stomach. Temporary relief may be given, but a cure seldom comes.

Until recently your physician would have said the only way to cure catarrh would be a change of climate; but now with Hyomei you can carry a health-giving climate in your vest pocket and by breathing it a few minutes four times a day, treat yourself successfully.

The complete Hyomei outfit costs but little and consists of an inhaler that can be carried in the vest pocket, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei. The inhaler lasts a lifetime, and if one bottle is not enough, an extra bottle of Hyomei can be obtained for a small sum. It is the most economical of all remedies advertised for catarrh, and is the only one that follows nature in her method of treating diseases of the respiratory organs.

"You've Got the Goods, Atlantic"

"Today, the specific gravity test is practically worthless as a check on the suitability of a gasoline. For example, for a given motor equipment, a 70° F. gasoline will run better than a 75° F. gasoline, in spite of the fact that the 70° F. gasoline will have a lower specific gravity than the 75° F. gasoline. The reason for this is that the 70° F. gasoline has a higher percentage of volatile constituents, which evaporate more readily than the 75° F. gasoline. The result is that the 70° F. gasoline will run better than the 75° F. gasoline, in spite of the fact that the 70° F. gasoline has a lower specific gravity than the 75° F. gasoline."

"Likewise the specification must contain a provision that all motor oil must be tested at a certain maximum temperature, in order to exclude from the gasoline the heavier petroleum distillates, such as kerosene."

Official Press-Statement by U. S. Govt. Bureau of Standards.

We've been preaching and practicing the same thing for years. The testing point of Atlantic Gasoline is always uniform. It meets Uncle Sam's idea perfectly.

WHEN you need that little spurt to carry you over the brow, it's good to know there's Atlantic Gas in the tank. For Atlantic recognizes no obstacle.

It tackles its task with vim, vigor and determination and it has the strength and stamina to win-out against all odds.

You tank-up with good old Atlantic Gasoline. See that there is nothing else in the tank at the time, just to give Atlantic a fair trial. Man, alive! After that, you'd flat-tire it steen miles to get Atlantic, rather than risk any other fuel.

The only way to prove this out is to glide up alongside an Atlantic pump and tell the man to go ahead and grind out five-gal or so. It's worth trying, eh, it's worth trying.

How to Make a Gallon of Gasoline Go Further Than It Does.

In the first place, use care in the selection of fuel. Gasoline which does not vaporize with sufficient readiness to remain in a gaseous state eventually condenses in the cylinders and is either burned or lost without developing its power. Furthermore, the gasoline must be pure, with a minimum amount of residue which will serve to form carbon.

Secondly, the gasoline must be burned under the most favorable conditions conducive to a development of maximum power following each explosion. Such conditions require tight piston rings and valves, which prevent the leakage of compression or the power of the explosion; a uniform and quickly attained engine temperature; a hot, fat spark occurring as early as is possible without producing a knock, and a sufficiently flexible carburetor which will give proper mixtures at all engine speeds. The above mentioned maintenance of engine temperature is an important consideration, especially in cold weather.

Thirdly, the carbon should be removed from the engine as soon as an undue accumulation is indicated, usually every 500 to 1,000 miles, depending upon the kind of oil used, the condition of the rings, the nature of the fuel, and the like.

In the fourth place, the mixture should be set to as lean a point as will run the motor under normal conditions when the engine is warmed to its average temperature. Nearly every carburetor will permit the needle valve to be screwed down one or more notches. In fact, it is well to set the carburetor to so lean a mixture that the engine will not pull properly before it is thoroughly heated. The difficulty thus encountered may be overcome by the use of the choke or other adjustments of the carburetor which serve to give a richer mixture when starting. A lean mixture may be further assured by the use of some of the well tried out attachments designed to furnish auxiliary air to the engine under certain conditions.

Fifth, the carburetor should be inspected by an expert and the strainer drained frequently to prevent the accumulation of dirt which may lodge under the float valve and cause the latter to leak when the engine is shut down.

Sixth, the engine should never be left running while the car is standing idle. If adjustments are properly made the engine will start easily, and the current from your starting battery is cheaper than gasoline. Furthermore, the engine should not be raced at random for testing purposes unless you have a definite idea as to just where the trouble lies.

Seventh, all brakes should be free so that they do not drag, bearings should be well oiled, tires inflated to the pressure recommended by the manufacturer and the whole car so free in its motion that it can be pushed by hand without difficulty on a hard level pavement.—H. W. Slauson in Leslie's.

Dynamite Whiskers.

The name "whiskers" is applied to feathery crystals which gather upon the outside of the wrappings of frozen dynamite. The "whiskers" are more "irritable" than dynamite itself. A case is on record where sticks of dynamite had been thawed out in hot water and the can of hot water in which it was done left in the blacksmith shop without being emptied of the residual scum of grease and whiskers. The first blow of the blacksmith's hammer on a nearby anvil was sufficient to set off the "whiskers" by concussion. The can was blown to pieces, but fortunately no one was hurt.

Loyalty, like charity, should always begin at home.

If we practiced what we preach few of us would have any time left for preaching.

Whenever you are annoyed by a grouchy man remember that it hurts him more than it does you.

If you expect to believe everything you hear, better not listen much of the time.

Mother's Doll Story

The Night Ride

Once upon a time there was a gray dappled pony and a white bunny who were great friends.

They lived in a nice nursery that belonged to some twins, a little boy and a little girl.

The dappled pony belonged to the little boy, and the white bunny was his sister's. And you can't imagine what lots of fun the four had.

One day the little girl had a present of a big doll that had beautiful golden hair. All the rest of the toys in the nursery thought her too beautiful to play with.

"She's stuck up," said the choo-choo car.

"Her hair is too much like gold," answered the box of paints. "If I had my brush with me I would paint it red this minute!"

"She has real lace on her petticoat," said Dinah, the biggest black doll. And Dinah whisked her apron so some dust would fall on the real lace.

"Let's be kind to the stranger," said the dappled pony, going up to the new doll. "Would you like a ride in my cart?"

"Oh, sir," said the new doll, "I'm afraid I could not drive you!"

"I can drive him!" cried the white bunny. "I'm his friend."

So the white bunny helped the new doll into the dappled pony's cart, and off they went around and around the nursery for a nice drive.

Shedding Letters.

I'm a worker most active, most useful, most known.

Of all that are busy in country and town, take from me one letter and yet my good name

In spite of this loss will continue the same. Take from me two letters and still you will see

That precisely the same in effect I shall be. Take from me three letters, or even take four. Yet still I continue the same as before.

Answer.—The postman.

Scandinavians.

The term "Scandinavians" is not confined to the Norwegians. The Norwegians are indeed Scandinavians, but so also are the Swedes, Danes and Icelanders. For that matter, the Germans, English and Americans of English stock are also of the Scandinavian family, since it is more than probable that Germany was originally stocked from the land of the northmen, and it is from the north German stock that the so-called Anglo-Saxon comes.

Chemistry of Human Body.

The average human body, besides the carbon, hydrogen, oxygen and nitrogen of which it is chiefly composed, contains three and three-fourths pounds of lime, one pound eleven ounces of phosphorus, two and two-thirds ounces of potash, two and one-half ounces of sodium, one and three-fifths ounces each of magnesium, sulphur and silica and about one-sixth of an ounce of iron.

CLAM BOUILLON.—One pint of finely minced clams and their liquor, a pint of water, salt, a blade of mace and a dash of cayenne. Cook until it boils, strain through a cloth, serve in cups and add a large spoonful of whipped cream to each cup.

Salmon Risque.—Drain the oil from a can of salmon and with a silver fork pick the fish to pieces, discarding all skin, bones and fat; cover with boiling water, let simmer half an hour and drain again. Scald one pint of milk in a double boiler and add one-fourth teaspoonful of soda and six tablespoonfuls of cracker crumbs. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, blend in two tablespoonfuls of flour, stir in slowly one pint of well seasoned white stock, cook until smooth, combine with the crackers and milk, then add the prepared fish. Season with pepper and salt and heat before serving.

Tomato Bouillon.—Stew a can of tomatoes until soft enough to strain. Rub all but the seeds through a strainer, add a teaspoonful of sugar, a teaspoonful of salt and a saltspoonful of pepper; then add a quart of boiling soup stock. Serve with croutons.

Cream of Spinach Soup.—Boil spinach until tender, then drain it, chop and pound it until it is a smooth paste. Use one cupful. Make one pint of white sauce with two cupfuls of milk, one-fourth cupful of butter, one-fourth cupful of flour. Add the spinach and let boil once. Add three cupfuls of white broth and salt and pepper as needed. The beaten yolks of two eggs mixed with one-half cupful of cream give a richer soup. Do not boil the soup after the addition of the eggs.

Cream of Indian Soup.—Mix together one-half teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of flour and one-quarter cupful of Indian meal. Sift slowly, stirring constantly into a quart of boiling water. After boiling up well put in a double boiler and cook an hour and a half. Add one cupful of cream, a dash of paprika and let scald. Serve at once and garnish with popcorn.
